Introduction

"Three-quarters of companies 'implement e-learning'." From <http://www.virtual-college.co.uk/news/Threequarters-of-companies-implement-elearning-newsitems-801215527.aspx>. Nov. 19, 2011.

E-learning has become a way of life for many businesses. Figures for K-12 school systems and universities are not available but I believe the adoption rate for them is similar. It has become an essential channel for both formal and informal learning.

In 2012, corporate training was a \$200 billion industry. ELearning represented $56 billion of that and is expected to double by 2015. The LMS market alone is expected to grow to nearly $2 billion in 2013 and, according to MarketsandMarkets to over $7 billion by 2018.

This is a list of as many vendors of e-learning software as I can identify. It is not possible to have a comprehensive and completely up-to-date list. Companies go in and out of business and are purchased by other companies. Re-branding is a regular occurrence. Many corporations and universities have built their own proprietary systems and have made them available only in a limited way if at all. I have included vendors that offer products that are commercially and readily available. The focus is on those available in English and for which information is available on the World Wide Web. Although there are many international vendors listed, the focus is on those available readily in North America. As a result, there are numerous tools in other countries and languages not listed here. The list evolves monthly as I learn of new products and changes.

The demise of the LMS is a topic for discussion (see "Death of the LMS" and <http://www.tonybates.ca/2012/04/04/why-learning-management-systems-are-not-going-away/>). The LMS is not going away but it is evolving and the addition of social media and integration with other systems has made the categories very messy.

They are listed alphabetically by the name of the company in the categories:

- Corporate Learning Management Systems \(LMS\)
- Learning Content Management Systems \(LCMS\)
- Course Authoring Tools
- Virtual Classrooms
- Generic \(off-the-shelf\) eLearning Courseware Vendors
- Education Learning Management Systems \(ELMS\). The term "Course Management Systems" is often a term applied to Learning Management Systems designed for educational environments but it is easily confused with Content Management Systems. The term Virtual Learning Environment (VLE) is also used. This list is divided into "Commercial" (i.e. proprietary) and "Open Source" systems.
- Apparently discontinued or changed products. Change happens. Companies go in and out of business. Mergers take place. This list includes changes that I have identified. It is included for those who may know products by their previous names and are curious about their status.

Several vendors have complete suites of these tools so are listed several times. The terms above are not mutually exclusive and different vendors may use different terms to describe their products. Some products were originally known by one name and have been purchased by other companies or changed names. Sometimes the products are listed under both names.

Listings are alphabetical by company name. If you only know the name of the product, try a search. Countries of origin are frequently included. Where they are not included, assume that they are based in the U.S. Canadian vendors are indicated by this highlight.

The top vendors in the market are highlighted in yellow. According to Bersin & Associates (2009), "The six largest LMS product companies constitute approximately 50% of the market." The report does not specify which six these are but the largest vendors in the corporate market are:

- SumTotal (including GeoLearning) (now owned by Skillsoft)
- Saba
- Meridian
- IBM Smarter Workforce/Kenexa/Outstart (Kenexa purchased Outstart and was then purchased by IBM).
- SAP SuccessFactors (SuccessFactors purchased Plateau and was then purchased by SAP)
- Oracle (they offer several solutions including Oracle Taleo Learn Cloud. (Learn.com was purchased by Taleo which was then purchased by Oracle in Feb. 2012)
- NetDimensions
- Cornerstone OnDemand
- Skillsoft Skillport – Skillsoft is the largest vendor of off-the-shelf courseware and Skillport is primarily designed as a delivery tool for that courseware. Skillport may be replaced with the new one – percipio.
- Topyx

The largest LMS in the education sector are

- Blackboard
- Brightspace (formerly Desire2Learn)
- Moodle (open source)
- Instructure Canvas (gaining traction on the above)

Learning Management Systems (LMS)

Learning Management Systems (LMS) are included in two categories:

1. Corporate
2. Education

LMS manage learners and facilities, launch and track online learning and keep records of the activity.

Corporate LMS usually include registration and management of classroom instruction as well as eLearning management and delivery. Some corporate LMS add e-Commerce capability and may include regulatory compliance, competency, performance, human capital and talent management which link closely to Human Resources functions. Corporate LMS tend to emphasize the management of asynchronous (self-directed) online learning because there is no assumption that an instructor will always be present. Course authoring and content management were not usually included in a corporate LMS in the past except as part of a suite that included learning content management (LCMS) but now, as more and more LMS include authoring, the distinction between an LMS and an LCMS has become hazy.

Educational institutions are usually already well equipped for registration and management of classroom instruction so Education LMS tend to be primarily for online learning and they usually provide course authoring and some content management features. Consequently they sometimes call themselves LCMS. They are also called Course Management Systems (CMS) or (less commonly today) Virtual Learning Environments (VLE). They also emphasize communication and collaboration features. They are generally built on the assumption that an instructor is always available to build course content and to communicate with students.

This way of categorizing LMS is a bit arbitrary and there is a good deal of overlap between them. Sometimes it has more to do with the way the vendors market their products than the features they offer. Organizations looking for LMS should not ignore the possibilities of using an LMS primarily focused on the other sector. For example, corporate LMS can be very useful for educational institutions with a business focus such as distance education units offering courses for sale. Open source products tend to be most appropriate for educational institutions but many business enterprises have found them useful as well.

To add to the confusion, many educational institutions and corporations brand their systems differently within their organizations. For example, the University of Akron calls its implementation of Desire2Learn "Springboard!". This can make it difficult to find out if an organization is using a commercial LMS or one they built for themselves.

As more and more corporate LMS add authoring and content management tools to their LMS, the distinction between an LMS and an LCMS becomes rather hazy.

Common features of Learning Management Systems:

- Online (eLearning) course launching and tracking.
- Classroom instruction management is included in most full-fledged corporate LMS but not in all and is not normally included in education LMS.
- Blended learning is the ability to manage courses that mix online and classroom instruction and is included in the more ambitious systems.
- Talent management includes tools for recruitment, performance management, compensation and benefits, succession, retention and career planning. They are included in several of the most ambitious corporate systems but are not normally

- included in Education LMS.
- Communication and collaboration (Web 2.0). These tools have long been included as part of education LMS and more and more corporate LMS are including them now. Also called social learning and networking.
 - eLearning development tools (authoring and publishing) are often included in corporate LMS and are included in LCMS and education LMS.
 - Content management of internal course materials is normally part of LCMS and education LMS and may be included as part of a suite.
 - Assessment and testing. The ability to produce tests and assessment both as part of courses and separately is normally included as part of LCMS and education LMS but only occasionally for corporate LMS.
 - Virtual classrooms. They are not normally included as part of an LMS but may be included as part of a suite. Many LMS provide integration with third party virtual classrooms.
 - E-Commerce. The ability to charge users for the courses internally and externally is a feature which is being included in more and more systems. Sometimes called extended enterprise when companies use their system to extend their offerings to customers, suppliers, partners, etc.
 - Reporting. All good systems provide good reporting functions and the ability to customize reports.
 - Mobile learning. Many vendors are beginning to add mobile learning functionality to their LMS so learning can be accessed on smartphones and other small mobile devices. Many offer “responsive” output that automatically adjusts to the size of the viewing screen. Many mobile features are available as “apps” for which there are many suppliers. I have not attempted to list them here.
 - Social learning. Along with mobile learning, social learning (offering tools like Facebook) is an important new offering which LMS providers are rushing to include.
 - SaaS (Software as a Service). Some Learning Management Systems are offered as software that is installed internally in the organization (“behind the firewall” or “on premise”). Some are offered as hosted or SaaS (Software as a Service) solutions. The terms Cloud Computing and “on-demand” are also used for this. Many are offered both ways. The major suppliers of cloud storage are Amazon, Microsoft, Google and Rackspace but many companies provide their own and there are several hundred in total. A company called Box provides unlimited cloud storage for higher education institutions that adopt Box through the Internet2 NET+ initiative.
 - E-learning standards: There are a variety of standards that exist to help support interoperability of courses and applications. AICC, SCORM (in several versions – 1.2, 1.4, 2004), the new Tin Can/Experience API, IMS (including LTI – Learning Tools Interoperability and, in higher education, another learning analytics standard launched in 2015 – IMS Caliper), and others. Most LMS subscribe to at least one of these standards but they should always be tested to be sure that your course material works with them. Useful information can be found at:

Talent Management Systems: Corporate learning management systems are sometimes part of human resource information systems (HRIS). Many major LMS have moved into talent management. Talent management includes recruitment, performance management, compensation and benefits, succession, retention, career planning, learning and development. As a rule, they are oriented to planning and do not provide the day-to-day processing capabilities such as payroll. The terms human capital management and workforce productivity are also used.

Talent management/LMS vendors listed below include Cornerstone OnDemand, Halogen Software, HRsmart, IBM Talent Management (aka Kenexa), Oracle Taleo, SAP SuccessFactors, Saba, Silkroad, SumTotal Systems (a Skillsoft company) and TEDS.

Other talent management systems include Centranum <http://www.centranum.com/>, Ceridian <http://www.ceridian.ca/>, Cezanne Software <http://www.cezannesw.com/>, EmployWise <http://www.employwise.com/>, Epic Software <http://www.epic-soft.com/>, Exelsys <http://www.exelsys.co.uk/>, Meta4 <http://www.meta4.com/>, NuView Systems <http://www.nuviewinc.com/>, PeopleFluent <http://www.peoplefluent.com/>, Ramco Systems <http://www.ramco.com/>, Sage <http://na.sage.com/> (Their talent management solution is Cornerstone on Demand), Ultimate Software <http://www.ultimatesoftware.com/>, Vana Workforce <http://www.vanaworkforce.com/>, and Workday <http://www.workday.com/>.

Consolidation is accelerating in this area. ERP vendors have been purchasing talent and learning management companies. ADP acquired Workscope in 2010. Taleo purchased Learn.com in 2010 and then Oracle purchased Taleo/Learn.com in 2012. Infor acquired Lawson in 2011. Ceridian bought Dayforce in 2012. SuccessFactors purchased Plateau in May, 2011 and then SAP purchased SuccessFactors/Plateau in 2012. In 2012 IBM bought Kenexa which had bought Outstart earlier in 2012. Skillsoft purchased SumTotal in 2014. In October, 2015, Workday announced that it would be building its own LMS rather than buying one because “LMSs are broken”. This consolidation is happening at the high end of the market. At the same time, many new lower cost LMS’s are appearing.

Selection of an LMS

There are hundreds of possibilities. With all these choices, how can you find a single LMS? The choice of an LMS is like that for any enterprise system. It can change the culture of your organization. Due diligence is required.

There is no single best LMS. The best one for you is the one that best matches your needs. Ideally, the process involves several steps – identifying needs, narrowing your choices to perhaps five, conducting demos and trials if possible, issuing RFP’s (Request for Proposals), and final selection. In addition to the features mentioned above consider cost and service. The LMS providers have become very creative about their business models. It seems that no two of them charge for the same things in the same way. For example, some charge for everyone registered in the system whether they use it or not, others charge only for active users; some charge for hosting content, others do not. There seem to be almost as many different pricing models as there are different LMS's. It is important to choose a system and pricing model that is consistent with your overall business plan. One tool that you may find useful is The Corporate University Blueprint. Christopher Pappas has a useful article at <http://elearningfeeds.com/the-insiders-guide-to-learning-management-systems-pricing-models/>. John Leh of Talented Learning has excellent articles at <http://talentedlearning.com/lms-license-models-what-in-the-world-is-going-on/> and <http://talentedlearning.com/public-lms-pricing-only-for-smb/>.

Needs Assessment

- Form a committee that consists of at least one of each of the following –
 - a company manager who has the power to make the decision
 - a person who will be working as an administrator of the system
 - an instructor
 - a learner
 - an IT person
- Then conduct surveys and interviews to identify the needs.
- Separate the must have's from the nice to have's.
- Develop learning scenarios that work for you and use them in the demos by the vendors. Test them with your content if possible.
- Shortlist the vendors.
- Submit RFPs.

Corporate Learning Management Systems (LMS)

The following LMS are designed primarily for use in corporate environments although some products may also be used in educational institutions.

Notes:

Google and other search engines are arguably the greatest informal research and learning tools that we have. Almost everyone involved in the knowledge industries, teachers, students and many others consult them daily. In 2008, Google launched Google Code University <http://code.google.com/edu/> with sample course content and tutorials for Computer Science (CS) students and educators on current computing technologies and paradigms. In 2012, this became the Google Developers University Consortium <https://developers.google.com/university/>.

Social networking sites like Facebook, YouTube (owned by Google), Delicious, Twitter, Wikipedia and many others are enjoying huge popularity. In 2010, Facebook first had more hits than Google. More learning probably occurs using these tools than with all the formal tools listed here. Many LMS vendors are adding social networking and informal learning tools to their products.

Some organizations modify web content management systems to work as LMS. Web content management systems are used to maintain complex web sites. They include Microsoft Sharepoint, Drupal, Sitecore, OpenText, etc. For example, in 2011 the American College of Cardiology launched a learning management system (LMS) built with Sitecore's Web Content Management System (CMS) software by Velir Studios.

In 2011, Terrence Wing wrote a popular article about the use of Facebook as an LMS. http://www.learningsolutionsmag.com/articles/612/?utm_campaign=ismag&utm_medium=email&utm_source=ism-news.

History and Trends of Learning Management System (Infographic)
<http://www.oxagile.com/company/blog/history-and-trends-of-learning-management-system-infographics/>. There is another infographic on the history of the LMS at <https://www.mindflash.com/learning-management-systems/history-of-lms/>. Note that they agree about the SoftArc release of FirstClass in 1990. FirstClass was eventually absorbed by OpenText but, while they still offer it, they have done little with it. Some of the founders of FirstClass have started Edsby. The introduction of Training Partner (now GeoTalent) by Geometrix in 1992 is also significant. Both SoftArc and Geometrix were/are Canadian companies.

SumTotal Systems resulted from a merger between Click2Learn and Docent. They have since purchased Pathlore and DK Systems. In June, 2009, SumTotal Systems was acquired by Vista Equity Partners/Amber Holding. In 2010, SumTotal purchased SoftScape and on January 5, 2011, they purchased GeoLearning. In July 2011, they purchased CyberShift Inc. and Accero Inc. signifying a further expansion into Talent/Human Resources Management.

In Oct, 2006, Skillsoft purchased NETg. Skillsoft purchased ElementK from NIIT in 2011 and Mindleaders in 2012 making it by far the largest supplier of online generic courseware. Skillsoft offers the Skillport LMS and ElementK offered the KnowledgeHub LMS. In March 2014, Skillsoft itself was purchased by Charterhouse Capital Partners for a reported $2.3 billion! In 2014, Skillsoft purchased SumTotal Systems - a major development. In 2017, Skillsoft announced Percipio <http://www.skillsoft.com/percipio/> - a new LMS to replace Skillport.

SilkRoad purchased VTN Technologies in Nov. 2008.

Moodle is the most popular open source LMS. As of April 2015, it is estimated that it has 70,000,000 users. There are numerous companies who provide services to clients to customize, implement, manage and host it. These include Moodlerooms (<http://www.moodlerooms.com/>) (They call their Moodle-based LMS “joule”). Moodlerooms has been purchased by Blackboard), Lambda Solutions (<http://www.lambdasolutions.net/>), open2know.com (<http://open2know.com/>), ClassRunner (<http://www.classrunner.com/>), DualCode (<http://www.dualcode.com/>), Elearning Experts (<http://elearningexperts.net/>), LearningHouse <http://www.learninghouse.com/>, eThink <http://www.ethinkeducation.com/>, Easy Authoring

Several themes have been developed for learning management. They include Academy, Clever Course, EduLMS, Guru, Learndash, LifterLMS, LMS | Responsive Learning Management System, Namaste!, Woodle, WP Courseware, and WPLMS. Also see <http://theforest.net/> and other sources mentioned in this document. See also <http://www.premiumwp.com/learning-management-system-lms-wordpress-themes/>. Other LMS have plug-ins that allow them to integrate with Wordpress.

Salesforce.com (Salesforce.com, Inc.). Salesforce offers training on its own products on a platform called Trailhead. It makes myTrailhead available as a general LMS with guided training paths, gamification and rewards. Numerous LMS providers provide close integration with Salesforce including ExpertusOne, Litmos, Cornerstone OnDemand, Mindflash, NetExam, Arlo, etc. Some LMS are built on the Salesforce platform including Learnsmarter and Motivis.

Other content management software used to develop LMS's includes Joomla, Drupal, Ruby on Rails, Umbraco, etc.

Blackboard purchased Prometheus in 2003 and WebCT in 2005 and became the dominant vendor in the education market. They are primarily focused on the formal education sector but they also market to corporations. Blackboard also purchased Angel Learning in May, 2009 and Elluminate and Wimba (virtual classroom tools) in July 2010 and has integrated them into a new product called Collaborate. Blackboard also purchased iStrategy in 2010 and incorporated it into Blackboard Analytics suggesting a move into broader school administration. Blackboard itself was purchased by Providence Equity Partners in 2011. This probably reflects only a change of ownership and not of management. Providence also owns Edline, now “Blackboard engage”. In Nov. 2011, Blackboard purchased CerBibo, a Chinese online learning company. In March 2012 Blackboard purchased MoodleRooms and NetSpot extending its reach into open source services. The Vista version of WebCT is being phased out by Blackboard in 2013 and replaced with Blackboard Learn. Blackboard will continue to support Angel and Edline for the foreseeable future. In 2013, Blackboard also purchased MyEdu – a site for career planning that links students with employers. In 2014, Blackboard began offering their software in a variety of SaaS configurations. In 2014, Blackboard purchased ParentLink and in 2015 Blackboard acquired Schoolwires, a company that provides Web sites, hosting and management for K-12 schools and districts - the next step in Blackboard's plan for world domination of the K-12 sector. In 2015, Blackboard purchased Remote-Learner a UK based Moodle Partner and provider of open source solutions, Nivel Siete – a Moodle Partner based in Latin America, and X-Ray Analytics, a tool for predicting student performance trends, which will be integrated into the company's open-source learning management systems MoodleRooms and Enterprise Moodle. In 2015, they announced a significant cloud-based redevelopment they are calling Learn Ultra or the Ultra Experience and they purchased Blue Canary, a higher education predictive analytics company focused on retention.

Data integration among different systems is an important topic for the implementation of LMS. Although beyond the scope of this report there are numerous companies that provide tools for data integration. Some of these include: Actian, Adaptris, Attunity, Built.io, Celigo, DBSync, Dell Boomi, Fujitsu, IBM, Informatica, Jitterbit, Kimono, Microsoft, Moskitos, MuleSoft, Oracle, SAP, Scribe Software, SnapLogic, TerraSky, and Youredi. See Gartner report Magic Quadrant for Enterprise Integration Platform as a Service.

Learning Content Management Systems (LCMS)

While LMS manage learners and record keeping, LCMS provide authoring capability and manage the content of courses. Typically, course content is stored as learning objects in a learning object repository database. The objects are described and tagged so these objects can be recalled and reused by the same course designers and others.

Because many LMS are taking on the features of LCMS and vice-versa, there is a duplication of vendors on this list with the previous list. Some companies which offer both make a distinction between them and name them separately; some don't. The distinction between LMS and LCMS is becoming increasingly vague as LMS providers add authoring tools to their offerings. Arguably, any LMS that includes an integrated authoring capability (more and more common now) is an LCMS. Most LCMS offer at least modest LMS capability as well.

Some education oriented systems call themselves LCMS. Because their primary function is the creation and delivery of content, this is quite understandable. I prefer to call them education LMS and have them in a separate category. They are also known as Virtual Learning Environments (VLE) and as Course Management Systems (but this can be confused with content management systems (CMS)). The term CMS (Content Management System) is usually used to refer to a system to manage content on a website. LCMS are specialized CMS which are specifically designed to manage learning content.

KnowledgeNet Monsoon STUDIO was purchased by Thomson NETg. In Oct, 2006, Skillsoft purchased NETg. In March 2014, Skillsoft itself was purchased by Charterhouse Capital Partners for a reported $2.3 billion! A major development - in August 2014 it was announced that Skillsoft would be purchasing SumTotal Systems.

In July, 2008, OutStart merged with EEDO. In June, 2009, OutStart merged with Hot Lava Software. The merged companies operated under the OutStart name. Kenexa purchased OutStart in February 2012. IBM purchased Kenexa in August 2012. The Kenexa brand is still used.

VTN Technologies was acquired by SilkRoad in Nov. 2008.

Course Authoring Tools

It is, of course, possible to create web-based learning courses directly by programming in HTML or Flash but the following course authoring tools are designed to simplify the process. Tools like Adobe/Macromedia Authorware (still supported but no new development) and SumTotal ToolBook have been around since before the World Wide Web and have evolved with it. There are, of course, many companies who offer custom course development as a service (see Consulting/Custom Development Companies). This is a listing only of those who offer authoring courseware for sale.

Categories of authoring tools:

- Comprehensive: Some course authoring tools are quite comprehensive - creating web pages, interactivity, tests and assessments, animations, screen simulations, video and audio. The more complex ones require more expertise and can benefit from programming experience. Examples of this are SumTotal ToolBook, Trivantis Lectora, Articulate Storyline and ReadyGo. Some, like the ones above, are desktop tools which install on individual computers and allow authors to create courses independently. Web-based tools offer collaborative authoring. Examples are Composica and dominKnow Claro. Some vendors provide both desktop and web-based versions.
- Rapid eLearning: These are primarily PowerPoint and/or MS Word to web (usually Flash) conversion tools. PowerPoint can be a powerful authoring tool in expert hands but both the instructional design and the technical implementation of it take time. Too often companies use rapid eLearning tools as tools for taking bad PowerPoint presentations and making them into even worse eLearning. Several of these latter tools have expanded to include more and more capability. Some examples are Articulate Presenter, Adobe Presenter, and Trivantis Snap! by Lectora.
- Tests and Assessments: Specialized tools for the creation of tests, quizzes, assessments and surveys. Many course authoring tools include some of this capability but the specialized ones include much more capability. Examples are Questionmark Perception, Respondus, Pedagogue, ReallyManaging Assessment, and TCExam. There are also tools that are specifically designed just for doing surveys like Zoomerang, Survey Monkey, Lime Survey and any-survey.
- Screen capture tools: Used largely to record screen interactions for software simulation training. Examples include Adobe Captivate, Techsmith Camtasia, and Qarbon Viewlet Builder.
- Mobile learning tools: Mobile learning requires specific design considerations because of the smaller form factor of some devices. Some comprehensive authoring tools include the ability to publish to mobile learning formats like HTML5.
- More sophisticated simulation tools for social and business simulations. Examples are Experience Builder, NexLearn SimWriter and Roleplay (now Skilitix InterAct).
- Audio and video: There are many available tools for creating, editing and incorporating audio and video into eLearning. Examples include Audacity, Kaltura, woople and Mindflash.
- Virtual Worlds: There is an emerging category of tools that offer social networking, conferencing and virtual environments/worlds. They often use avatars. Some are:

- ActiveWorlds
- Avaya web.alive
- Second Life
- VastPark
- VenueGen

Course authoring tools are often incorporated into LCMS and Education LMS but are not available separately. These are frequently web-based and enable collaborative authoring. Some authoring tools are add-ons to LMS and others are independent products. The independent ones often include or offer a simple LMS to track the courses created with their tools.

It is difficult to categorize authoring tools comprehensively. Every possible flavor exists and there is a good deal of overlap in these categories. As a rough guide I have tried to note, where possible, which type each tool is. For additional tools that I don't classify as "course authoring" see the list of "Some tools for adding interactivity to courses".

For best of breed, it may be appropriate to use several tools in combination, for example Questionmark Perception and Respondus offer test creation tools beyond any other authoring tools.

As of April 2015, the most popular full-function authoring tools are:

- Adobe Captivate
 - Articulate Storyline
 - Trivantis Lectora
 - DominKnow Claro
 - Harbinger Raptivity
 - ZebraZapps
 - iSpring Pro
1. 3Dsolve 3D4M (3Dsolve Inc.) <http://www.3dsolve.com/3d4m.html>. A software environment for collaborative simulation-based training.
 2. 4system WBExpress 6.0 (4system Polska Sp. z o. o.) <http://www.4system.com>. The company is based in Poland and Germany. WBExpress 6.0 comes in several versions including WBExpress PRO and a free downloadable version.

 4. Acrobatiq Smart Author (Acrobatiq – powered by Carnegie Mellon) <http://acrobatiq.com/products/smart-author/>. An adaptive learning authoring tool with mobile delivery and student performance analytics. Also offer the "Smart Courseware" courses on various post-secondary topics.
 5. AcroServices AcroTrain e-Learning System (AcroServices) <http://www.acroservices.com>. A PowerPoint conversion tool.
 6. Acteon Seminar Author (Acteon Communication and Learning) <http://www.seminar.co.uk/>. Produces SCORM 1.2 modules. Includes assessments and mobile learning. They also offer Knowledge Centre and Seminar Portal.

Based in the UK.

7. ActiveWorlds (ActiveWorlds, Inc.) <http://www.activeworlds.com/>. An avatar-based virtual world or environment.
8. A.D.A.M. ROECycle Studio™ (A.D.A.M., a business unit of Ebix) <http://www.taimma.com/>. Formerly Taimma. Also offer other tools and medical training courses. It is not clear if this tool is available for purchase or if it is just used internally for custom development.
9. Adobe AIR (Adobe) <http://www.adobe.com/products/air/>. A runtime that lets developers use web technologies to build Internet applications that run outside the browser on multiple operating systems in order to provide performance support to mobile learners, who can be either online or offline.
10. Adobe Authorware (Adobe) <http://www.adobe.com/products/authorware/>. One of the original course authoring systems along with ToolBook (SumTotal Systems). In Aug. 2007, Adobe announced that it was discontinuing further development of Authorware but it will continue to sell Authorware 7 and support it. In 2015, the page is still accessible but hasn't been updated in a long time.
11. Adobe Captivate (Adobe) <http://www.adobe.com/products/captivate/>. (formerly RoboDemo) – primarily a screen application capture tool but its capabilities have been extended so that it is now a complete authoring tool – perhaps the most popular one. Now with HTML5 capability and Tin Can compliance. As of 2015, also offer Captivate Prime (Adobe's first full LMS) and Captivate Draft (a storyboarding tool).
12. Adobe Contribute (Adobe) <http://www.adobe.com/products/contribute/>. A web publishing and website management tool that integrates authoring, reviewing, and publishing in a WYSIWYG HTML editor.
13. Adobe Creative Cloud (Adobe) <http://www.adobe.com/creativecloud>. Adobe now offers its entire collection of creative apps in the cloud for a monthly subscription.
14. Adobe Director (Adobe) <http://www.adobe.com/products/director/>. Works with Adobe Shockwave Player for development of games and multimedia applications including eLearning.
15. Adobe Dreamweaver (Adobe) <http://www.adobe.com/products/dreamweaver/>. A widely used website creation tool (HTML editor) which can be used for course authoring as well, particularly with the CourseBuilder extension.
16. Adobe Edge (Adobe) <http://html.adobe.com/edge/>. A new (2013) set of cloud-based web design tools including Edge Animate CC, Edge Reflow CC, Edge Inspect CC, and others. Adobe Edge Animate's open structure and use of the JavaScript programming language gives developers the ability to produce complex learning interactions and games, and the software's HTML5 output is universally viewable on all modern browsers.
17. Adobe E-learning Suite (Adobe) <http://www.adobe.com/products/elearningsuite/>. The suite includes Flash, Captivate, Dreamweaver, Photoshop, Acrobat Pro, Presenter, Soundbooth, Bridge CS5 and Device Central CS5.
18. Adobe Experience Manager (Adobe) <http://www.adobe.com/marketing-cloud/enterprise-content-management/mobile-app-development.html>. A tool for building, managing and delivering mobile apps for any purpose including training.
19. Adobe Flash (Adobe) <http://www.adobe.com/products/flash/>. The Flash player is an almost universal animation/video plug-in. The Flash program itself can be used for course authoring in the hands of a skilled programmer. It is losing ground as a popular platform because it doesn't work on Apple mobile devices. In Dec. 2015, it was announced that Flash Professional was becoming Adobe Animate CC.

20. Adobe Flash Builder (Adobe) <http://www.adobe.com/products/flashbuilder>. A development environment for building games and applications.
21. Adobe PhoneGap (Adobe) <http://phonegap.com/>. A cross-platform tool for developing mobile apps including elearning. Originated by Nitobi which was purchased by Adobe in 2011.
22. Adobe Premiere Pro (Adobe) <http://www.adobe.com/products/premiere.html>. A popular video editing tool. Available as part of Adobe Creative Cloud. Often used with Adobe After Effects <http://www.adobe.com/products/aftereffects.html> for further enhancement.
23. Adobe Presenter (Adobe) <http://www.adobe.com/products/presenter/>. A PowerPoint converter/editor that allows adding video, audio, quizzes, links, etc. to PowerPoint presentations. Includes Adobe Presenter Video Express (also sold separately) that allows you to make videos interactive. Designed to work specifically with Acrobat Connect Professional (see Virtual Classrooms) but can also be used for self-paced eLearning.
24. Adobe RoboHelp (Adobe) <http://www.adobe.com/products/robohelp/>. For building help systems.

Adobe is a major player in the eLearning field but mainly for course authoring (Flash, Director, Dreamweaver, Captivate, etc.) and virtual classroom (Adobe Connect Professional). Adobe does not offer a true LMS but they announced in August 2015 that they were building one and it became available as Adobe Captivate Prime.

Many LCMS and education LMS (e.g. Blackboard, D2L, Moodle) offer course authoring tools as part of their systems but the authoring tools are not available separately.

A list of PowerPoint to Flash conversion tools is available at http://www.masternewmedia.org/2004/04/14/powerpoint_to_flash_conversion_tools.htm

Joe Ganci has produced an article called “Seven Top Authoring Tools” providing a comparison of their features at http://www.learningsolutionsmag.com/articles/768/?utm_campaign=lsmag&utm_medium=email&utm_source=lsm-news.

Kineo offers reviews of authoring tools at <http://www.kineo.com/m/0/authoring-tools-for-multi-device-delivery.pdf>.

Each year, Jane Hart produces a list of the Top 100 Tools for Learning compiled from the Top 10 Tools lists of learning professionals worldwide – from education, training and workplace learning. Her definition of “tools” is very broad. It is interesting to note that the tools that head the list are standard search and social media tools like Twitter, Google, Youtube, Facebook, etc.

There is an excellent article from ADL Co-Laboratories on choosing an eLearning authoring tool at <http://www.adlnet.gov/wp-content/uploads/2013/08/Choosing-Authoring-Tools.pdf>.

In 2017, an emerging area is tools for making video interactive. Several are listed here and the company HiHaHo has a list of such tools including those that are used primarily for marketing at <https://www.hihaho.com/interactive-video-software-tools-platforms/>.

Virtual Classrooms

Also called Web Conferencing, these tools provide an interface for synchronous, over-the-web meetings for small or large groups (large group meetings are often called webinars) and classes. They typically include a whiteboard for presentation and data sharing with interactive graphic tools. They may also include video sharing, audio tools, a chat window for instant messaging among participants and polling and feedback tools. Many offer recording so that the presentation can be viewed later. Some vendors cater to business and some to education. Tools designed strictly for webcasting lack some of these interactive tools.

With some exceptions, virtual classrooms are not typically included in LMS but are available as third party solutions. Most LMS offer integration with specific third party tools.

The term “Virtual Learning Environments” is a term used to describe education learning management systems particularly in the UK. More recently it has come to mean a web-based platform that enables a virtual event or simulates a conference. In the ELearning Media Group Learning Trends Report, “New Horizons: Virtual Learning Environments” (2011, January) they are described as a blend of Webcasts, virtual classes, learning rooms, networking lounges, resource libraries, and social media. They fit between virtual classrooms and virtual worlds like Second Life.

There are also the “unified communications” tools like Cisco Jabber,

- The set-up and moderation of a virtual classroom session is challenging for a single person. If the provider does not offer it, it is often advisable to have assistance such as that offered by Seneca.

Generic (off-the-shelf) eLearning Courseware Vendors

Many organizations have found that it is useful to purchase generic courseware for information technology, communications, sales, financial skills, ethics, values, diversity and regulatory compliance. This is a list of some of these. It is impossible to list all the vendors here. Many of them also offer an LMS or LCMS to manage their courseware and although subscribers have access to the LMS information and it may integrate with their own LMS, the courseware provider's LMS is not often offered as a standalone product. Many LMS vendors offer courseware libraries through reseller agreements with these courseware developers. Many technology companies offer courses for learning the use of their software offerings. More and more service organizations are offering eLearning for specific purposes on their websites (everything from courses on beer to IT security) and using custom developed platforms that may or may not be available separately. The major publishers like Pearson, McGraw-Hill, etc. are offering both online textbooks and courses.

Notes:

Many companies are now offering what they call eLearning on their public websites. This is often just a collection of promotional/marketing videos or white papers. In other cases they are legitimate learning materials. A filter of healthy skepticism is required. Government agency sites such as the Canadian Centre for Occupational Health and Safety \(CCOHS\) are usually worthwhile.

MOOC's (Massive Open Online Courses) are a new development (a disruptive technology) in the university sector. Sites like edX, Coursera, Udacity, Codecademy, Skillshare, Udemy, P2PU, openlearning, and others are offering free or very low cost university courses. Most are non-credit but increasingly courses are being offered for credit. Some of the MOOC's have developed their own platforms; others are using well-known LMS like Blackboard, Moodle, Desire2Learn, etc.

Other MOOC like offerings:

- The Kahn Academy.

- Open Culture <http://www.openculture.com/freeonlinecourses> offers “650 free online courses from top universities.”
- 50 free sources of learning for business <http://www.ht2.co.uk/ben/?p=452>.
- MyEducationPath is a website that attempts to help both students and vendors navigate in the eLearning course space especially among the post-secondary MOOC's. They currently list nearly 6,000 courses. They don't offer courses but provide links to them.

Harvard Business School will be offering its own MOOC in 2014 on a platform they call HBX that is a customized version of edX.

More off-the-shelf listings:

- <http://www.e-learningcentre.co.uk/directory/>.
- <http://www.elearninglist.com/supplier-map>.
- <http://www.trainingindustry.com/>. They provide a supplier directory and a rating of top 20 companies in various categories.

Education Learning Management Systems (ELMS)

(also called Course Management Systems but that is too easily confused with Content Management Systems). They are also called Virtual Learning Environments (VLE). They are similar to corporate LMS and/or LCMS but specifically target the formal educational environment. Some education oriented systems call themselves LCMS. Because their primary function is the creation and delivery of content, this is quite understandable. I prefer to call them education LMS and have listed them separately in this category. Most open source systems are designed for formal education.

Educational institutions are usually already well equipped for registration and management of classroom instruction with Student Information Systems \(SIS\) so Education LMS tend to be strictly for online learning and typically do not include classroom registration capability. They usually provide course authoring and some content management features as well. They also emphasize communication and collaboration features. They are generally built on the assumption that an instructor is always available to build course content and to communicate with students.

There are businesses that choose to use ELMS products – particularly those that support the use of open source tools. And the reverse is true - sometimes a corporate LMS is appropriate for the formal education sector, for example, to be used for distance education.

There are two categories – commercial (proprietary) and open source. Not listed here are platforms that various universities have developed themselves and may have shared them with other institutions through cooperative agreements but have not made them available publicly. Examples of universities that have developed their own systems include the Brigham Young University, Maryland University, Western Governors University, and the Oberta University in Catalonia. The University of Phoenix is probably the largest provider of formal eLearning with approximately 200,000 students online as well as 100,000 more in classrooms. It made a large investment in developing an adaptive learning platform called “Classroom”. In 2015, it experienced numerous problems and abandoned the project and will be adopting Blackboard Learn Ultra.

Many universities and schools use an LMS but customize it for themselves and call it something else, for example, Illinois State University calls its version of Sakai “ReggieNet” and Virginia Tech called its version “Scholar” (In 2015 Scholar is being replaced by Instructure Canvas – also built on open source software – Ruby on Rails). Sakai was also used to develop Classes*v2 that has been used by Yale, Stanford, the University of Michigan, Indiana University, and others. Most of these are transitioning to Canvas.

According to a report done by Educause in 2014, 99% of U.S. higher education institutions surveyed have an LMS in place. LMS have an average age of about 8 years, and 15% of US institutions are planning to replace their LMS within the next 3 years. The full report is available at <https://net.educause.edu/ir/library/pdf/ers1414.pdf>.

Open Source Education LMS

Open source LMS are those built on open source platforms like PHP/MySQL, Java, Python, etc. or on open source content management systems (CMS) like Joomla, Drupal, Ruby on Rails, Wordpress, Umbraco, etc. Others are customization of open source LMS like Moodle, Sakai, etc.

Most open source systems were built for education but have been adopted by both educational organizations and some companies. There are a few listed here which are designed for businesses.

Although the software is free in many cases, substantial institutional support is necessary, so the total cost of ownership must be addressed. One useful case study is the article “Why We Switched to Sakai” by Timothy M. Chester of Pepperdine University <http://campustechnology.com/articles/2010/10/06/why-we-switched-to-sakai.aspx>.

Some systems are built on open source platforms but are available only from the vendors and not as free downloads. Examples of this are Dokeos, Instructure Canvas and Latitude Learning.

 40. Microsoft Classroom (Microsoft) <https://classroom.microsoft.com/>. New in August 2016, it is part of Office 365 Education. It is a K-12 homepage for classroom assignments and resources and works with OneNote Class Notebooks—a workspace where students can find and share assignments, receive feedback and collaborate. It is like Google Classroom. Not a full LMS but can be integrated with several LMSs.
 41. MimerDesk <http://www.icewalkers.com/Linux/Software/516760/MimerDesk.html> MimerDesk is an open source web-based collaborative learning and groupwork environment.
 42. Moodle (open source) <http://www.moodle.org>. Probably the most widely used open source system. Developed by Martin Dougiamas in Australia. Support is provided by many partners <http://moodle.com/partners/>. There are many add-ons/plugin-ins available, for example, the plug-in for the WizIQ virtual classroom and the facetoface add-on for tracking classroom instruction. Released in May 2013, Moodle Mobile is an HTML5-based mobile app for both Android and iOS. In 2014, Microsoft announced that Office 365 (including “Office Mix” – a PowerPoint “superset” with which students and teachers can annotate slides, add audio and video, and embed interactive elements like quizzes and even host them on OfficeMix.com) is now integrated with Moodle. In 2015 Moodle introduced MoodleCloud that comes with free hosting, unlimited database space for an unlimited number of courses, full support, and use of virtually all Moodle capabilities (advertising supported).
 43. Morzino (Joopita Research a.s.b.l) <http://morzino.com/>. A “virtual school” platform for teachers, students and parents. Includes authoring. Based in Luxembourg.
 44. MyiCourse <http://www.myicourse.com/>. Not technically open source but a free web-based service for developing and posting courses. Primarily aimed at smaller organizations that want to develop courses. Available free for organizations that offer their courses for free. Advertiser supported.
 45. Open edX Platform <http://code.edx.org>. A MOOC platform (developed by edX and released as open-source software in June, 2013. (edX was founded by Harvard and MIT and has been joined by at least 12 other universities including Berkeley, University of Toronto, McGill, and Stanford.) Google is also supporting this platform. In 2015 they partnered with Microsoft to offer some IT development courses.
 46. Open Elms Pro (e-Learning WMB) <http://www.openelms.org/>. Marketed as a business solution. Includes authoring (Jackdaw) and video integration. The company also offers customizable eLearning courses and custom course development.
 47. Open LMS <http://openlms.sourceforge.net/>. Includes group collaboration. Not yet SCORM, etc. conformant. Hosted by the Norwegian University of Science and Technology (NTNU).
 48. OpenOLAT <http://www.openolat.com/>. Includes authoring, collaboration, testing and mobile access. Supports SCORM modules. Developed at the University of

- Zurich. The original website <http://www.olat.org/> is no longer available.
49. OpenSWAD <https://openswad.org/>. SWAD stands for shared workspace at a distance. The source code can be downloaded at <https://openswad.org/download/>. Based in Spain. Available in nine languages.
 50. PASS-PORT (Innovative Learning Assessment Technologies (ILAT), LLC) <http://www.pass-port.org/>, <http://www.ilat.org/>. LMS for post-secondary with add-ons for students' systematic assessment. Two tools – Campus Wide (to help streamline a school's data collection and analysis) and Departmental Assessments to aggregate data across multiple departments and track more detailed information of the students' program of study.
 51. Pearson OpenClass (Pearson Education, Inc.) <http://www.pearsonhighered.com/openclass/>. A free LMS integrated with Google (Technically a Google App rather than true open source) announced in October, 2011. Includes course authoring, social networking, and access to Open Educational Resources (OER). Pearson is getting out of the LMS market and OpenClass will no longer be available as of January 2018.
 52. Rice University OpenStax (<http://cnx.org/>) offers "an environment for collaboratively developing, freely sharing, and rapidly publishing scholarly content on the Web." Formerly Connexions.
 53. Sakai <http://www.sakaiproject.org/>. Available as a free download or from commercial partners. Began as a U.S. university consortium, Sakai has taken several other open source initiatives under its wing which makes it a strong player. There were two versions: Sakai CLE (includes learning management, project and research collaboration and ePortfolios) and Sakai OAE (Open Academic Environment with social and personalization features. Version 10 released in 2014 appears to combine both. In 2012 Sakai merged with Jasig to form Apereo. As with Moodle there are companies that offer their own versions and support for Sakai. They are called Commercial Affiliates. Among those are Unicon and Asahi Net International, now Scriba. Sakai has been in a state of transition and some of the institutions that were the original developers of Sakai have left the consortium and are moving towards Instructure Canvas.
 54. Sensei (Woothemes) <http://www.woothemes.com/products/sensei/>. A free LMS plug-in for WordPress. Also offer Woocommerce – an eCommerce plug-in. Can also work with other WordPress themes such as BuddyPress/Social Learner for Sensei for social learning.
 55. Social Media Classroom and Collaboratory <http://socialmediaclassroom.com/>. A Howard Rheingold project based on Drupal.
 56. Summit Personalized Learning Plan (PLP) (Summit Learning) <http://info.summitlearning.org/program/personalized-learning-platform/>. Developed at California-based charter network Summit Public Schools with the involvement of The Zuckerberg/Chan foundation (Facebook), PLP is a free, open-sourced learning management system that boasts a full Common Core curriculum for grades 6 through 12, including projects, online learning resources and tests. It helps students set and track goals, learn content at their own pace, complete deeper learning projects and become self-directed learners. Summit partnered with Stanford's Center for Assessment, Learning, and Equity to develop the rubric for evaluating the cognitive skills in each grade.
 57. Teachable (Teachable, Inc.) <https://teachable.com/>. Formerly Fedora. Fedora was an open source learning content management/learning object repository system

- developed at Columbia University. It has been expanded into a full-fledged learning platform for both education and corporate sectors that is not free although built on open source software. It is a course marketplace that includes authoring, quizzes, discussion forums, website integration, marketing tools and eCommerce.
58. Totara (Totara Learning Solutions) <http://totalms.com/>. Totara is a custom distribution of Moodle for the corporate sector. Available through many commercial partners worldwide.
 59. Uzity (Foradian Technologies <http://foradian.com/>) <http://uzity.com/>. A brandable LMS built on Ruby on Rails with authoring, an equation editor, assessments and collaboration tools. Marketed to both education and business. Based in India. Also offer Fedena <https://fedena.com/> - a school management system, student information system (SIS) and ERP for maintaining all school records.
 60. WeBWork <http://webwork.maa.org/>. An online homework delivery system primarily used for mathematics and science. Developed at the University of Rochester.
 61. Whiteboard Courseware System <http://whiteboard.sourceforge.net/>. Whiteboard is a fully featured LMS targeted toward colleges and universities. It is written in PHP with a MySQL back-end, and is fully administrable through its web interface.

Notes:

MOOC (Massive Open Online Courses). In 2002 MIT (Massachusetts Institute of Technology) decided to share its course material freely on line <http://ocw.mit.edu/>. This initiative has grown and numerous websites now offer free university courses to 1000's of learners. These include edX, Coursera, Codeacademy, Openlearning, P2PU, Udacity, and Udemy. Arguably Khan Academy (all kinds of topics) and Lynda.com (computer technology courses) can be included in this group but the courses are organized and presented differently and are not university sanctioned. MOOC technology is beginning to be applied to corporate learning. Intrepid Learning offers what may be the first corporate MOOC solution. Most MOOCs appear to operate on their own proprietary learning platforms. edX has made its platform available to others as has 2U. Some popular education LMS like Blackboard, Desire2Learn, and Instructure Canvas also market their products as MOOC platforms. CourseTalk lists online courses from 54 different providers (MOOC platforms) and 500 universities with student ratings. They are working with the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) to expand quality education and career training globally. Educators Serving Educators (a division of Excelsior College) offers services to higher education institutions for establishing online learning. Eduventures provides research on innovations in higher education and published a report on LMS implementation in 2016.

Student Information Systems (SIS), also called school management or school administration software are systems that manage most aspects of school operation including registration, financial, human resources, student data, and even healthcare information. Some of them include learning management functionality and most will integrate with third party LMS.

There are numerous other open source ELMS listed at <http://sourceforge.net>. Do a search for "Learning Management Systems or "Virtual Learning Environments". http://www.edtechpost.ca/gems/open_source_cms3.htm lists about 30 - they tend to be management systems for education environments developed at universities around the world but the list is very old now (2003).

Moodle is the most popular open source LMS. As of August 2015, they estimate 76,000,000 users (not a great deal of growth in the past two years as noted below). There are numerous companies who provide services to clients to customize, implement, manage and host it. These include Moodlerooms (<http://www.moodlerooms.com/>) (They call their Moodle-based LMS “joule”. Moodlerooms has been purchased by Blackboard), Lambda Solutions (<http://www.lambdasolutions.net/>), open2know.com (<http://open2know.com/>), ClassRunner (<http://www.classrunner.com>), DualCode (<http://www.dualcode.com>), LearningHouse <http://www.learninghouse.com/>, Easy Authoring (<http://www.easyauthoring.com/>), Totara <http://www.totaralearning.com/>, (Totara is a version of Moodle designed for the corporate sector), Kineo <http://www.kineo.com/>, Catalyst IT Europe (<http://www.catalyst-eu.net/>), NetSpot (<http://www.netspot.com.au/>), Lingel Learning <http://lingellearning.com/> in Australia, (Ballistic Learning (<http://www.ballisticlearning.com/>) (represented in North America by Algol Semantics (<http://www.algolsemantics.com/>), Webanywhere <http://www.webanywhere.co.uk/> and <http://www.webanywhere.com/>, and Nivel Siete <http://www.nivel7.net/> in Latin America (also purchased by Blackboard). A complete list of Moodle Partners can be found at <http://moodle.com/partners/>.

Moodlerooms and NetSpot were purchased by Blackboard in 2012 and Nivel Siete was purchased by Blackboard in 2015.

Delta Initiative <http://www.deltainitiative.com/> is an independent management consulting company that serves institutions of higher learning and businesses across the United States. They have provided a graphic illustration of the market share of LMS's in the higher education sector (see below – originally posted on the e-Literate blog at <http://mfeldstein.com/state-of-the-higher-education-lms-market-a-graphical-view/> and updated by Phil Hill at http://mfeldstein.com/state-higher-ed-lms-market-spring-2016/?utm_source=e-Literate+Newsletter&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=9655ef3f5d-RSS_EMAIL_CAMPAIGN&utm_term=0_deab6fbf84-9655ef3f5d-40282245.

Further observations from the above:

- As has been true since 2012, the fastest-growing LMS is Canvas. There is no other solution close in terms of matching the Canvas growth.
- While we continue to show Canvas in the Open Source area, we have noted a more precise description as an Open Core model.
- Blackboard continues to lose market share, although the vast majority of that reduction over the past few years has been from customers leaving ANGEL. Blackboard Learn lost only a handful of clients in the past year. At this point ANGEL has under 1% of market share.
- With the University of Phoenix move from a Homegrown system to Blackboard Learn Ultra, the band for Homegrown has dropped to less than 1% of institutions.
- Pearson has announced LearningStudio's end-of-life for the end of 2017, and there are some big for-profit systems moving to D2L Brightspace and to Canvas. In fact, you can already see Brightspace increasing growth from past years based largely on former LearningStudio clients.
- There is a line for Other, capturing those systems with less than 50 active implementations as primary systems; systems like Jenzabar, Edvance360, LoudCloud Systems, WebStudy, Schoology, and CampusCruiser. Of these, Schoology is growing the most, primarily from smaller private institutions (their sweet spot). At this rate, Schoology may move to its own band by next year.
- It is interesting to reiterate that both Homegrown and Other categories have decreased over the past two years.

Notes:

It is interesting to note that the major IT companies – Microsoft, Google, Oracle, IBM, SAP, and Intel – each offer some products but didn't seem to have a clear strategy in the eLearning/Learning Management space and the products they did offer were often difficult to find on their websites.

In 2012, however:

- SAP purchased SuccessFactors/Plateau
- IBM purchased Kenexa/Outstart
- Oracle purchased Taleo/Learn.com
- Google introduced Google Apps for Education \(now G Suite for Education\) and in 2014 offered Google Classroom.
- In 2015 SAP and IBM announced a linking of SuccessFactors and Kenexa.

Microsoft has several products in the eLearning space none of which can be described as a learning management system. With the exception of Skype for Business, they seem to hide them well. Microsoft has a variety of tools that are listed below

- Skype for Business <https://products.office.com/en-CA/skype-for-business/online-meetings>. Formerly Lync, it is a web conferencing/virtual classroom tool that has morphed into Skype for Business. Lync was formerly Live Meeting. Live Meeting was originally PlaceWare. Microsoft offered the original NetMeeting product as part of its Windows operating system but it is no longer supported. They offered Windows Meeting Space on Windows Vista but it does not seem to have been included in Windows 7. Microsoft also offers Surface Hub that is a high-end videoconferencing system.
- ESP <https://msdn.microsoft.com/en-us/library/ff798293.aspx>. A 3-D simulation development tool that evolved from the flight simulator. Status of this product is unclear.
- Office 365 Education <https://products.office.com/en-US/student/office-in-education>. The online suite of Office products for education including OneNote Class Notebooks – a workspace where students can find and share assignments, receive feedback and collaborate and, as of August 2016, Microsoft Classroom - a homepage for classroom assignments and resources that can be integrated with several LMS.
- Sharepoint Server. Sharepoint is a content management system that Microsoft developed for collaboration, portals, enterprise search, enterprise content management, business process and business intelligence. Numerous companies have built LMS solutions on SharePoint or have integrated other LMS solutions with it.

 - <http://www.xstreamsoftware.com/>
 - <http://www.intralearn.com>
 - <http://www.opentext.com/what-we-do/products/specialty-technologies/learnflex>.
- Microsoft OneNote Class Notebook Creator <https://store.office.com/onenote-class-notebook-creator-WA104371260.aspx> that helps teachers set up a shared notebook for a class for SharePoint 2013 subscribers. As of 2016, can be integrated with LMS.
- Multipoint Server 2010 <http://www.microsoft.com/windows/multipoint/default.aspx> One computer, multiple users. Each student has an account which can be managed. Folders can be created for each student to save private data. Students can easily share files, videos, and more with and between groups. Students can watch videos or listen to music and podcasts without disturbing everyone else.
- Silverlight <https://msdn.microsoft.com/en-us/silverlight/bb187358.aspx>. This is a plug-in that Microsoft is promoting as an alternative to Adobe Flash. So far the uptake has been underwhelming.
- Microsoft Sway <https://sway.com/>. New in 2015, a tool to create and share interactive reports, presentations, personal stories, and more. It is very similar to PowerPoint in many ways but Microsoft calls it a "digital storytelling app" and doesn't see it as a replacement for PowerPoint.
- Microsoft Education <https://education.microsoft.com/>. Offers tools and teacher resources. Also known as the Microsoft Educator Network and formerly called the Learning Suite.
- Another list of free Microsoft tools can be found at <http://elearningindustry.com/23->

microsoft-free-teaching-tools-for-educators-education.

- Microsoft also offers online training for Microsoft products and technologies at <https://www.microsoft.com/en-ca/learning/default.aspx>.

Oracle offers several learning management products – iLearning

<http://www.oracle.com/us/products/applications/ebusiness/human-capital-management/061822.html>, Oracle Learning Management (OLM)

<http://www.oracle.com/us/products/applications/ebusiness/human-capital-management/053815.html>, and PeopleSoft Enterprise Learning Management.

<http://www.oracle.com/us/products/applications/peoplesoft-enterprise/hcm/052836.html>.

It would appear that iLearning is strictly for online learning and OLM is a more comprehensive tool including the management of classroom training. The PeopleSoft tool is apparently for PeopleSoft customers. The website is unclear. In 2012, Oracle purchased Taleo/Learn.com which is now offered as Oracle Taleo Learn Cloud Service. In 2016, Oracle launched a new video learning platform that looks like a video library, and it is now becoming a strategic part of the company's HCM suite.

IBM used to offer the Lotus Learning Management System and Workplace

Collaborative Learning but they were removed from the market in August, 2009. IBM still offers IBM Sametime – a webconferencing/virtual classroom solution. Also offer IBM Connections – a cloud solution that includes a meetings function. At the end of 2012, the Lotus brand was discontinued. In 2012, IBM purchased Kenexa who had previously purchased the LMS vendor Outstart. Kenexa is now part of IBM Smarter Workforce. In 2015, SAP and IBM plan to integrate their Talent Management Systems linking Kenexa with Success Factors. This could have a significant effect on the learning management sector.

SAP Enterprise Learning (SAP America) <http://www.sap.com/training-education/learning-software-svc/learn/solutions/enterprise/index.html>. Includes an LCMS and authoring environment. This is an optional module of the SAP system apparently designed only to offer customers who insist on it. It is definitely not best of breed. Most SAP users (even SAP itself) choose other systems. SAP purchased SuccessFactors in 2012. Because SuccessFactors had previously purchased Plateau, SAP now offers the SuccessFactors Learning solution. In 2015, SAP and IBM plan to integrate their Talent Management Systems linking Kenexa with Success Factors. This could have a significant effect on the learning management sector.

The Intel/Critical Links Educational Appliance. (Critical Links) <http://education.critical-links.com/>. A one box solution for schools that have limited IT support – includes learning management system software (Moodle?), student information systems, a web server, wiki and forum support, backup and image management software, IP telephony, interactive whiteboard management software, storage and delivery of content and applications, management of student laptops, etc. and is managed through a simple web interface. Hardware by Intel, marketing by Critical Links. A preliminary description can be found at <http://www.zdnet.com/blog/education/the-intel-educational-appliance-the-coolest-tool-you-might-never-buy/4158>.

Adaptive Learning Platforms:

Adaptive learning is an important new trend – providing learning that adapts to learners' individual needs. It is related to but not identical to the concepts of individualized and personalized learning. These terms are used differently by different people and don't have clearly defined definitions. See one discussion at http://mfeldstein.com/personalized-learning-vs-adaptive-learning/?utm_source=subscribe2&utm_medium=email.

Also see the Tyton Partners report "Learning to Adapt 2.0: The Evolution of Adaptive Learning in Higher Education" at <http://tytonpartners.com/tyton-wp/wp-content/uploads/2016/04/Tyton-Partners-Learning-to-Adapt-2.0-FINAL.pdf>.

I view personalized learning as directed towards learner preferences – either by the learner or automatically by the platform (like Amazon, etc.) whereas adaptive learning adjusts to the learner's actual learning needs based on an intelligent algorithm.

However, my distinction is not universal and both terms tend to get used interchangeably so it is hard to tell. I list both "personalized" and "adaptive" platforms here.

Adaptive learning is still in its infancy but has a great deal of potential but beware of smoke and mirrors. There are challenges such as privacy, ethical issues, and promises by vendors of capabilities that cannot yet be delivered. It also is not easy. The Apollo Group (University of Phoenix) spent nearly a billion dollars developing an adaptive learning system but has abandoned it and will be using Blackboard as their LMS for now. Synaptic Global Learning (listed below) seems to have disappeared.

Many of the platforms listed here are also listed elsewhere in this document in relevant categories. Most are not full-featured LMS but do include analytics and are designed to be integrated with LMS. They also offer consultation services. There are many other such platforms under development.

- Achieve3000 (Achieve3000) <https://www.achieve3000.com/>. An adaptive platform that provides online differentiated literacy instruction based on initial and ongoing assessments.
- Acrobatiq Smart Author (Acrobatiq – powered by Carnegie Mellon) <http://acrobatiq.com/products/smart-author/>. An adaptive learning authoring tool with mobile delivery and student performance analytics. Also offer the "Smart Courseware" courses on various post-secondary topics.
- Adapt Knowledge (Adapt Knowledge, LLC.) <http://adaptknowledge.com/>. Adaptive learning programs for professional development. Formerly ULiveandLearn.
- ALEKS <http://www.aleks.com/>. ALEKS stands for Assessment and LEarning in Knowledge Spaces. It is "a Web-based, artificially intelligent assessment and learning system. ALEKS uses adaptive questioning to quickly and accurately determine exactly what a student knows and doesn't know in a course." They offer courses in mathematics and science for K-12 and higher education. Now owned by McGraw-Hill Education.
- Area9 Learning (Area9 Learning Inc.) <http://area9learning.com/>. An adaptive-learning platform and authoring for custom development/conversion of courses. Compatible with standard LMS and authoring tools. Specialize in the hospitality, transportation, energy, retail & consumer goods, and automotive industries.

Social networking/learning tools

It is natural that, with the increased popularity of SaaS, cloud computing, and social networking, the LMS would evolve to include those things. Many “behind the firewall” LMS are offering “hosted” (SaaS/cloud) solutions and are including social networking tools within the organization because many employers are reluctant to give employees access to Facebook, Twitter, etc. out of fear that they will waste time on them. Some of the following tools give access to outside the enterprise social networking but with a learning focus.

Social learning tools offer schools and corporations the opportunity to build communities of interest, to manage and capture informal learning, and to provide mentoring and coaching. These tools are being rapidly adopted not just because of their popularity but also because of the value they provide. This list barely scratches the surface.

Ed Cohen (2010) of Plateau Systems (now SuccessFactors) has written an interesting article called “Is the LMS Dead?” (<http://www.cedma-europe.org/newsletter%20articles/Clomedia/Is%20the%20LMS%20Dead%20%28Oct%2010%29.pdf>). I agree with his points that the LMS isn’t dead but is evolving and there are clearly some new options available as well such as the Rapid Learning Management Systems discussed earlier.

- Akiva WebBoard <http://www.akiva.com>. Communities for collaboration and knowledge management. Marketed to education, government and corporate.

Big Data integration, analysis and reporting tools

Educational institutions (universities in particular) have often accumulated a great deal of data about students in different systems like Learning Management Systems (LMS), Student Information Systems (SIS), etc. This is referred to as Big Data. Now tools are being developed to mine this data, analyze and report on it so that instructors and advisors can recruit students, monitor student progress and advise students accordingly. It is also being used by corporations to integrate data between ERPs, HRIS, and LMS. These are just a few.

- Alma offers an integrated SIS and LMS that combines the data.
- Arizona State University pioneered the use of extensive dashboards in 2009 (see "Dashboards Deliver Data Visually at ASU").
- Applied Predictive Technologies \(APT\) Test and Learn. Cloud-based software tools that enable large, consumer-focused businesses to use Big Data analytics by triangulating between business strategy, algorithmic math, and large databases to improve decisions. Not specifically designed for learning initiatives.
- AspirEDU. Offer a product called Dropout Detective™ that provides student retention analytics and identifies students at risk. Integrates with LMS to provide daily dashboards. A partner with Instructure Canvas. They also offer Instructor Insight - a faculty assessment tool.
- Austin Peay State University (TN) In 2011, the school launched Degree Compass, a course-recommendation tool that offers personalized suggestions in a way similar to Amazon.
- Civitas Learning Community is a network of four-year institutions, community colleges, and online universities that will link their homegrown Big Data solutions to a normalized data model built across the institutions. They have partnered with Echo360.
- HelioCampus (HelioCampus). An institutional analytics platform originally from the University of Maryland University College (UMUC).
- Maple (Maplesoft, a division of Waterloo Maple Inc., a subsidiary of Cybernet Systems Co. Ltd. in Japan). Maplesoft has been offering popular mathematical computing software for many years. Its latest version (Maple 2015) will enhance educators' ability to access, analyze and visualize data. They also offer simulation and testing and assessment tools.
- Oracle Marketing Cloud for Student Engagement. The platform is described as designed to allow higher education institutions to use big data to attract and retain more students. Information about students, prospective students and even alumni from multiple databases and sources around campus can be aggregated and analyzed.
- Predictive Analytics Reporting \(PAR\) Framework is a collaborative multi-institutional data-mining project supported by sixteen WCET member institutions. PAR utilizes "Big Data" exploratory techniques to look for patterns that identify causes of student loss and momentum in online learning. Purchased by Hobsons in 2016.
- Purdue's Course Signals is a system designed to track academic progress and warn students in real time if they need to work on certain areas. Purdue has also developed social learning tools like Hotseat and Mixable. Course Signals will be decommissioned in Dec. 2017.

- Schoolzilla. A tool for warehousing and displaying school data. Integrated with several SIS's.
- Smith System KeySix\(SM\). For driver safety management. Integrates and analyzes data from different systems.
- Splunk (Splunk Inc.). An operational intelligence platform for collection and analysis of the big data generated by technology infrastructure, security systems and business applications. Available in several versions. Used widely by universities. Has a strategic alliance with Accenture.
- Talend* Big Data. Uses open source software and a graphical environment for mapping big data sources and targets. Partnered with Cengage.

Lecture Capture Systems

Lecture capture is currently a hot topic in post-secondary education. The idea is to record lectures and make them available for students on the web. They can then be used by students who missed the class, for review, etc. Students tend to like it. I am, like Tony Bates, skeptical about the usefulness of this. We should be eliminating lectures altogether, not recording them. I also think that passively watching a video of a lecture is an inefficient way to learn or to review. A good set of lecture notes is much better. Recording lectures, however, may be a way of improving accessibility for some learners. An article on this topic can be found at <http://www.universitybusiness.com/article/lecture-capture-fresh-look>.

Some of the most popular tools for lecture capture are:

- Cisco Lecture Vision
